

CORPORATE TEAM BUILDING

WHAT OUR TEAMS HAD TO SAY...

We asked our last Team Building clients three questions, and this is how they responded!

What was your greatest take-away from your team building session?

- (re)Learning that some rules are made to be broken, some are flexible. Always question first-order principles.
- Don't fear what you don't know.
- Being able to contact different departments to resolve issues.
- Think win/win, it doesn't have to be exactly done the way I had it in my head for it to be done right.
- Each horse was very unique in its own way and reacted that way
- different team members will respond differently, what works for one may not work for another
- Leading with confidence.
- To fully understand the importance of communication and working together to achieve the common goal.
- Acknowledging and acting on the different communication styles
- We have a great and diverse management team
- Managing different personalities and what it takes
- Non-verbal communication
- Thinking out side box with in the perimeters we have
- Building trust with each other, and if it's not there, take the steps you need to work together to fix and improve it.

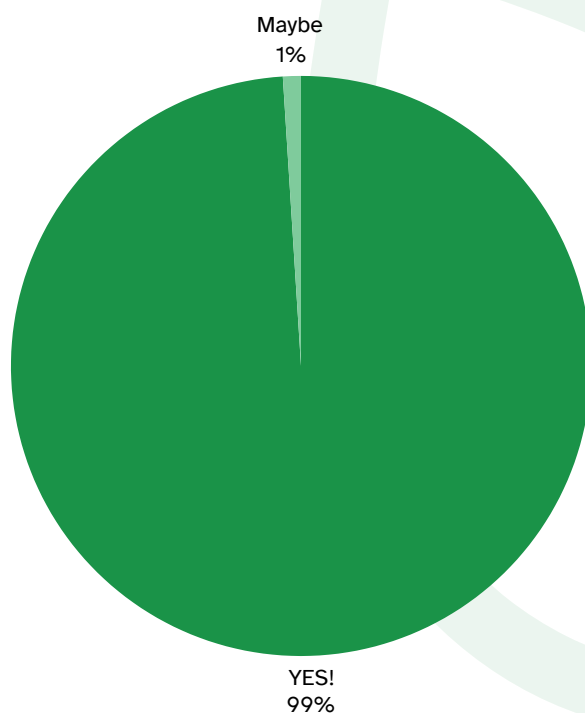

How will this apply to your workplace?

- Thinking outside the box, questioning rules (not the HR-type, of course).
- Greatly
- Better collaboration between departments and removing the lines of division.
- Be a better team leader in terms of clarity, communication, direction, and be confident
- To not micromanage or be disappointed if people don't share or execute my exact vision
- Simply, that we cannot expect, nor should we try, to treat everyone the same in all situations. That doesn't mean different rules for different personalities, but the way they are perhaps communicated with, is different.
- Different team members will respond differently, what works for one may not work for another
- It will help me lead the team better in the direction we need to go
- Do not assume the team understands what you are thinking and ensure to go the extra step so we are all on the same page.
- I find it applies to all aspects of dealing with homeowners, co-workers and family members
- There are different ethnicities and generations all working together
- Try to lead with gentle guidance instead of forcing people with pressure to do as you say
- To be a more effective team player
- Building trust = you have each other's backs
